

Self-perspective Values

Armin Ehsani*

Department of Psychology, Ferdowsi, Iran

Corresponding Author: Armin Ehsani, Department of Psychology, Ferdowsi, Iran.

Received: February 12, 2019

Depression again? Yep, that would be the second cause of disfunction in the world till 2020. In the main reasons of depression, you could name genetics, developmental conditions and developmental executive functions habits. One of the main aspects of Its symptoms is negative self-related thoughts. Self-related thoughts can be easily interpreted as self-perspective thoughts to a This-Moment conditions. It is mostly built on your developmental habits.

How do you do? It's a usual small talk but also a big question to consider: how does one think about his life, her/his achievements and behaviors? It is one of main source of inquiry in the psychological analysis. Don't miss the notion easily. after novel era of enlightenment years in 17th century, psychoanalysis had the big impacts on modern western cultures, as a human brain concept production. Then ask yourself again: how do you do?

Golden question? If we consider that's a golden question, the pathway to core concepts of its answer is not very clear and not an easy to get one. First you can draw a picture from your answers to this question and show yourself and your life in it. You are starting to sketch your perspective to yourself, your environment and your life. But after getting a blue print of your perspective to life, the hidden question ticking in the head.

Psychoanalyst try to change this self-perspective to tune your adaption with your own situation. But it's a heavy work to do. Lots of stones and lots of targets to hit, but wind direction is always doing its job too. In addition to unclear criteria for a right perspective to life, its meaning and the self, harder question can arise in the next step.

How can you incept the right perspective in one's mind? Have you ever tried to change your driving habits? Even at the moment you try to remember your habits, it begins to get a hard duty. It seems you need a paper and pen to write them one by one, right? Self-perspective is built on your long-lived learning and habits. So, it's not easy to access it at all.

But let change our perspective to the driving problem. How if you tell yourself what is the most important issues in driving and which one you are missing out by your habits? You don't feel uncomfortable to build and learn new behavior as much as you feel when you want change and old one. An Iranian proverb says quitting a habit leads to sickness finally.

So, what is the most important issue to build an adaptive self? Knowing that each self-perspective could be different, which concept of perspective is so rigid and important to build an adaptive mind and worth to keep it in your mind as an eternal criterion for building yourself perspective to world?

What are our values and which is our priorities? Which criteria is the most important for you to act? That's the question we could reach to in our short trip to our self-perspective.

Self-perspective Values

Modern societies are getting more competitive and more demanding for better self-efficacy and that is a stressor for us. But when you are looking into yourself, having your own made criteria always is a smoothing and assuring tool to self-assessing and self-communicating. And that's why you should use your paper and pen. Writing down your own built values in order of importance. It would be a wonderful trip to deepest corners of yourself and helps you to make new behaviors and quit old habits slowly and automatically. Have a nice drive dear!

Volume 8 Issue 3 March 2019

©All rights reserved by Armin Ehsani.